Case No. CJC-21-005188
JUDICIAL COUNCIL COORDINATION
PROCEEDING NO. 5188

IN RE UBER RIDESHARE CASES

ORDER ON PLAINTIFFS' MOTION FOR ORDER COMPELLING MARKETING &
LOBBYING DOCUMENTS

Plaintiffs' Motion for Order Compelling Marketing & Lobbying Documents came on regularly for hearing on February 2, 2024. Having considered the pleadings and papers on file in the action, and the arguments of counsel presented at the hearing, the Court hereby grants the motion in part and denies it in part.

BACKGROUND

On March 7, 2023, Plaintiffs filed a Master Long-Form Complaint against Defendants Uber Technologies, Inc. and Rasier, LLC (together, "Uber"). Plaintiffs alleged sixteen causes of action: (1) general negligence; (2) common carrier negligence; (3) negligent misrepresentation; (4) intentional misrepresentation; (5) negligent infliction of emotional distress (“NIED”); (6) intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”); (7) vicarious liability/liability for the torts of Uber drivers; (8) vicarious liability for sexual assault; (9) vicarious liability for sexual battery; (10) vicarious liability for false imprisonment; (11) negligence by misfeasance; (12) negligence by nonfeasance; (13) intentional concealment; (14) strict product liability – design defect; (15) strict product liability – failure to warn; and (16) fraud. (Compl. ¶¶ 164-348.) On June 22, 2023, the Court sustained Uber’s Demurrer to Plaintiffs’ Master Long-Form Complaint. (June 22, 2023 Order, 1, 19.) In particular, the Court sustained Uber’s demurrer as to Plaintiffs’ vicarious liability, fraud, misrepresentation, and strict products liability claims without leave to amend. (Id. at 1, 12, 15, 19.) The Court sustained Uber’s demurrer as to the negligent infliction of emotional distress claim with leave to amend. (Id. at 1, 16, 19.) On July 24, 2023, Plaintiffs filed a First Amended Master Long Form Complaint (“FAC”) alleging causes of action for general negligence, common carrier negligence, negligence by misfeasance, and negligence by nonfeasance. Plaintiffs allege as follows.

Plaintiffs “are individuals who were raped, sexually assaulted, sexually battered, sexually harassed, falsely imprisoned, kidnapped, physically assaulted, and/or otherwise assaulted and/or harassed by their Uber driver.” (FAC ¶ 6.) Uber is a transportation company that uses its app (“Uber App”) to “connect riders looking for transportation to independent transportation providers...looking for riders.” (Id. ¶¶ 1, 21-22.) Uber “drivers are largely nonprofessional, untrained individuals who use their own vehicles.” (Id. ¶ 44.)

As early as 2014, Uber became aware that its drivers were engaging in sexual misconduct or sexual assault against its passengers. (Id. ¶ 3; see id. ¶ 27.) Uber has “publicly acknowledged this sexual assault crisis.” (Id. ¶ 4; see id. ¶¶ 29, 121, 147, 149; see, e.g., id. ¶¶ 121-122 [approximately 250 reported sexual assaults per month in 2017 and 2018].) However, Uber “has actively chosen not to report instances of sexual assault that occur on the UBER App to the authorities” or other ridesharing companies. (Id. ¶¶ 84-86, 88, 134.) In addition, Uber does not proactively cooperate with law enforcement investigating cases passenger victims report to the police or participate in transportation network company (“TNC”) safety hearings. (Id. ¶¶ 89-94, 116-120.) Moreover, after a victim reports a

1 sexual assault, Uber often erases the victim's complaint and disables the victim's account, which 2 precludes the victim from accessing pertinent information such as the driver's name, driver's photo, 3 make and model of the vehicle, ride time, ride distance, and route. (Id. ¶¶ 94-95, 100, 102.)

4 Despite marketing itself as a safe and better alternative to other transportation methods, Uber 5 continues to hire drivers without conducting adequate background checks and screening procedures, 6 allows culpable drivers to keep driving for Uber, and fails to adopt and implement reasonable monitoring 7 and investigation procedures to protect passengers. (Id. ¶¶ 4, 24-25, 28, 30-31, 112-114, 131-133, 160-8 161, 164-168, 170-172, 189-190, 192, 209, 214-215, 218; see, e.g., id. ¶¶ 34-43, 66-69, 73-83, 130 [Uber
 9 Safe Rides Fee was a revenue source rather than a fund for implementing background checks, vehicle 10 checks, driver safety education, development of safety features, and insurance]; but see id. ¶ 111 [the 11 Uber App now includes an emergency button that allows a passenger to call 911].) Due to Uber's failure 12 to implement changes, passengers continue to be victims of sexual assaults. (Id. ¶¶ 28, 127.)

13 On September 19, 2023, Plaintiffs served Requests for Production of Documents ("RFPs"), Set 14 One on Uber. (Cubberly Decl. ¶ 6.) On October 23, 2023, Uber served responses and objections. (Id. ¶ 15 7.) Plaintiffs now move for an order compelling the production of documents related to Uber's 16 marketing and lobbying. (Opening Brief, 1.) In particular, RFPs Nos. 54, 56-71, 73, 94-95, 103, 106, 17 182-186, 193, 195, 250, 260-262, 294, and 299. (Id. at 2-4.) Uber opposes the motion.

LEGAL STANDARD

19 "Unless otherwise limited by order of the court . . . any party may obtain discovery regarding any 20 matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action . . . if the matter 21 itself is either admissible in evidence or appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of 22 admissible evidence." (Code Civ. Proc., § 2017.010.) "The admissibility of a document bears on its 23 discoverability in the sense that if the document is admissible, it necessarily is discoverable. But the 24 inverse is not necessarily true: the fact that evidence is not admissible does not mean that it is also not 25 discoverable." (Volkswagen of America, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 139 Cal.App.4th 1481, 1490 26 (cleaned up).) For discovery purposes, information should be regarded as relevant to the subject matter if 27 it "might reasonably assist a party in evaluating a case, preparing for trial, or facilitating settlement

1 thereof.” (City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (2017) 9 Cal.App.5th 272, 288, quoting People v.
 2 Superior Court (Cheek) (2001) 94 Cal.App.4th 980, 989.)

3 A propounding party may file a motion to compel a further response to a request for production of 4 documents when a “representation of inability to comply is inadequate, incomplete, or evasive” or “[a]n
 5 objection in the response is without merit or too general.” (Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.310(a)(2)-(3).) “A 6 motion to compel further response to a request for production of documents must “set forth specific facts 7 showing good cause justifying the discovery sought by the demand.” (Id. § 2031.310(b)(1).)

8 DISCUSSION

9 I. Marketing

10 Plaintiffs seek to compel responses to RFPs Nos. 54, 56-71, 73, 94, 106, 182, and 260-262 related 11 to marketing. (Opening Brief, 2-4.) Plaintiffs argue their allegations regarding negligence “are replete 12 with references to Uber’s marketing.” (Id. at 7.) In particular, Plaintiffs allege that because Uber 13 marketed itself as safe, documents related to marketing are relevant. (Id.; see Reply, 1-2.) Plaintiffs also 14 argue that Uber’s marketing is relevant to “Uber’s status as a common carrier.” (Opening Brief, 8; see, 15 e.g., Reply, 1 [“The relationship between a common carrier and its passengers is [] a special relationship.
 16 Because Uber is a common carrier – and because Plaintiffs have pleaded that Uber’s failure to warn 17 constitutes common-carrier negligence – Uber’s” marketing is “relevant to whether Uber fulfilled its duty 18 to warn its passengers of the risk of sexual assault.”].) Plaintiffs further argue that Uber’s marketing is 19 relevant to their punitive damages claims because “[c]onversations among executives about whether to 20 accurately market Uber’s risks to its passengers go to whether Uber acted in conscious disregard of the 21 safety of its passengers.” (Opening Brief, 8; see Reply, 2.) Uber disagrees, arguing that its marketing 22 documents are not relevant and would impose undue burden because Plaintiffs’ RFPs seek documents 23 relating to the fraud and misrepresentation claims that were dismissed by the Court. (Opposition, 5, 8-24 11.) Uber also contends that although public statements may be relevant to a common carrier claim, such 25 information is publicly available and does not support broad requests for its marketing documents. (Id. at 26 11-12.)

27 In the FAC, Plaintiffs allege that Uber was negligent by, amongst other conduct, representing or

1 advertising and marketing itself as a safe form of transportation. (FAC ¶¶ 173, 203 (“safe alternative to 2 driving and encouraging women to take UBER rides . . .”]; see also id. ¶¶ 2, 24-25, 66-69, 82, 145.)
 3 Although the Court sustained Uber’s Demurrer to the Master Long Form Complaint as to the fraud and 4 misrepresentation claims, the FAC continues to place Uber’s marketing at issue.

5 However, Plaintiffs’ allegations concerning advertising and marketing that Uber is safe do not 6 open the door to unfettered discovery as to Uber’s marketing. Plaintiffs seek to compel further responses
 7 to twenty-five RFPs, none of which are geographically limited and seven of which are not temporally 8 limited (RFP Nos. 70, 94-95, 106, and 260-262). Moreover, RFPs related to marketing to potential 9 drivers (RFP Nos. 54 and 56), marketing to women generally (RFP Nos. 58 and 95), all marketing plans 10 (RFP No. 57), all general ledger entries for Uber’s marketing expenses (RFP No. 182), general marketing 11 intended for or targeted at college or university students and campuses (RFP Nos. 260 and 261), and 12 general marketing that Uber provides a form of transportation for those consuming alcohol (RFP No. 262) 13 are overbroad in that they are not tailored to the subject matter involved in this proceeding. Furthermore, 14 RFP No. 63 is duplicative of RFP No. 61. Other RFPs readily capture the subject matter involved:
 15 safety. (See, e.g., RFP Nos. 59, 61-71, 73, 94, 106.)

16 Plaintiffs argue that the RFPs listed above are reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of 17 admissible evidence because Uber’s marketing purportedly was tailored to the asserted vulnerability and 18 other characteristics of consumers, including the twenty individual bellwether plaintiffs. For example, 19 Plaintiffs contend it is appropriate to compel the disclosure of documents relating to marketing to women 20 because all of the bellwether plaintiffs are women; that documents relating to marketing to those who 21 consume alcohol are similarly relevant because many of the bellwether plaintiffs consumed alcohol; that 22 two of the bellwether plaintiffs were college students; etc. Plaintiffs argue that these documents could 23 establish that Uber “lured” or misled passengers into taking rides that placed them in danger. As Uber 24 points out, however, these allegations essentially sound in fraud or negligent misrepresentation, yet the 25 Court dismissed those claims in the master long-form complaint with prejudice, finding that Plaintiffs had 26 not adequately pled reliance or false statements with particularity. No individual bellwether plaintiff filed 27 a short-form complaint following that ruling asserting that they were aware of or relied upon any

1 marketing or advertising representations regarding Uber's safety or the tailoring of its platform to female 2 riders, those consuming alcohol, college students, etc.¹ RFPs focusing on Uber's marketing that sound in 3 fraud are not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Nor are they 4 reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence regarding Plaintiffs' other claims, 5 such as their negligence and common carrier claims. To be sure, a common carrier has a special 6 relationship with its passengers that gives rise to a duty to protect them from foreseeable harm. (E.g., 7 Lopez v. Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. (1985) 40 Cal.3d 780, 785-791 [common carrier owes a duty
 8 to protect passengers aboard its buses from assaults from fellow passengers].) However, that duty exists 9 regardless of how or whether the common carrier markets its services. In any event, to the extent that 10 Plaintiffs seek to justify their discovery into Uber's marketing by arguing that Uber had a duty to warn its 11 passengers of the risks of sexual assault by its drivers, their requests are vastly overbroad and are not 12 tailored to that topic.

13 Therefore, Plaintiffs' motion is granted as to RFP Nos. 59, 61-62, 64-69, 70 [from 2009 to 14 present], 71, 73, and 94 [from 2009 to present], and is otherwise denied.² Uber's responses to these RFPs 15 shall be geographically limited to California as Plaintiffs have not made a showing of good cause to 16 justify a national scope for discovery into Uber's marketing regarding safety.

17 II. Lobbying

18 Plaintiffs seek to compel responses to RFPs Nos. 103, 183-186, 193, 195, 250, 294, and 299

19

20 ¹ At the hearing, Plaintiffs belatedly asserted that such claims are in fact made by three of the bellwether 21 plaintiffs, referred to as Jane Doe LSA 78, 82, and 49. However, the Court's demurrer ruling explicitly 22 stated that if any individual plaintiff wished to plead claims for fraud or negligent misrepresentation, they 23 were granted 30 days leave to amend the short-form complaints with the particularity required by 24 California law. (June 22, 2023 Order, 15.) The Court's review of the docket confirms that no amended 25 short-form complaints were filed following the Court's demurrer order. While one of the bellwether 26 plaintiffs in question filed a brief amended short-form complaint before that order, it merely adopted the long-form complaint. (See Amended Short-Form Complaint for Damages of Jane Doe LSA 49 (CGC-21-27 592321, filed May 12, 2023).) All three individual plaintiffs' original complaints contain boilerplate 28 fraud allegations substantially identical to those the Court found insufficient in its demurrer ruling. (See Compl. of Jane Doe LSA 49 (CGC-21-592321, filed June 17, 2021) ¶¶ 149-170; Compl. of Jane Doe LSA 82 (CGC-21-592430, filed June 22, 2021) ¶¶ 149-170; Compl. of Jane Doe LSA 49 (CGC-21-592321, filed June 17, 2021) ¶¶ 149-170; compare June 22, 2023 Order, 12-15.)

² At the hearing, Plaintiffs withdrew their motion as to RFP No. 106 [documents about incidents of sexual assault or sexual misconduct created by, sent by, or received by specified categories of Uber officers and employees] in light of the parties' agreement regarding custodial searches.

1 related to Uber's lobbying activities. (Opening Brief, 4-5.) Plaintiffs contend that Uber's lobbying
 2 activities are relevant to their negligence claims because Plaintiffs allege Uber spent millions of dollars
 3 lobbying against regulations, which resulted in self-enforced hiring standards for drivers. (Id. at 8-9.)
 4 Plaintiffs argue that they anticipate "that part of Uber's defense will be that Uber has followed the law 5 regarding the screening measures used to hire drivers and safety features present during Uber rides." (Id.
 6 at 9; see Reply, 3.) Uber opposes on the ground that Plaintiffs' broad RFPs regarding Uber's lobbying 7 activities are not relevant to any form of tort liability. (Opposition, 5.) Uber argues that there is no 8 authority to support discovery of its involvement for advocating for a statute or regulation, none of which 9 are specified by Plaintiffs, because it seeks to show it was in compliance. (Id. at 12-15.) Uber further 10 argues that RFPs Nos. 184, 195, and 294 "seek lobbying documents related to the independent contractor 11 status of drivers using the Uber App." (Id. at 15.) However, Uber's vicarious liability claims are no 12 longer at issue.

13 In the FAC, Plaintiffs allege that Uber has "spent millions of dollars lobbying against local 14 regulations requiring" fingerprint-based biometric checks. (FAC ¶ 78.) Plaintiffs also allege that Uber 15 "lobbies state and local governments to limit what is required of Uber with respect to driver background 16 checks" [and] "lobbies local government entities to continue allowing Uber to perform its own 17 background checks of its driver applicants, rather than municipalities performing the more stringent 18 screening they do for traditional taxi drivers." (Id. ¶ 79.) Indeed, Plaintiffs allege that Uber "has 19 successfully persuaded lawmakers in several states to keep background check requirements for its drivers 20 limited." (Id. ¶ 80.) Plaintiffs allege that as a result of Uber's "lobbying efforts, those entities largely 21 self-enforce hiring standards for their drivers." (Id. ¶ 81.)

22 The Court is unpersuaded that Plaintiffs' allegations regarding Uber's lobbying activities 23 regarding background checks or sexual assault render their requests for lobbying documents relevant to 24 the issues or reasonably likely to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. Under the Noerr- 25 Pennington doctrine, those who petition the government are generally immune from liability. (People ex 26 rel. Gallegos v. Pacific Lumber Co. (2008) 158 Cal.App.4th 950, 964.) Although the doctrine was first 27 developed in antitrust law, "the principle applies to virtually any tort, including unfair competition and

1 interference with contract." (Ludwig v. Superior Court (1995) 37 Cal.App.4th 8, 21 fn. 17.) "The 2 principle unquestionably applies to commercial speech and competitive activity—even anticompetitive
 3 activity." (Id. at 23.)³

4 California courts have applied the Noerr-Pennington doctrine in a wide variety of procedural 5 contexts and to a wide range of types of claims. (See, e.g., Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal.3d 311, 322-6 323 [doctrine applied squarely to plaintiffs' allegations that defendants successfully conspired to legalize 7 and monopolize the operation of poker clubs in city in violation of the Cartwright Act]; Neurelis, Inc. v.
 8 Aquestive Therapeutics, Inc. (2021) 71 Cal.App.5th 769, 792-793, 795-797 [petition filed by 9 pharmaceutical manufacturer's competitor requesting FDA to stay approval of manufacturer's epilepsy 10 drug until additional clinical studies could be conducted was protected by Noerr-Pennington doctrine]; 11 Premier Medical Management Systems, Inc. v. California Ins. Guarantee Assn. (2006) 136 Cal.App.4th 12 464, 478-479 [Noerr-Pennington doctrine barred medical provider's action against workers' 13 compensation insurers disputing bills].) "The Noerr-Pennington doctrine has been extended to preclude 14 virtually all civil liability for a defendant's petitioning activities before not just courts, but also before 15 administrative and other governmental agencies." (People ex rel. Gallegos, 158 Cal.App.4th at 954.)
 16 Thus, Uber's lobbying activities, whether before the state Legislature, cities and counties, or the 17 California Public Utilities Commission, cannot give rise to liability. (Blank, 39 Cal.3d at 322 18 ["defendants' efforts, according to the very allegations of the pleading, were directly at influencing 19 government action and as such are squarely within the protection of the Noerr-Pennington doctrine."].)

20 Plaintiffs fail to offer any persuasive argument as to how discovery regarding Uber's lobbying 21 activities may be relevant to the issues properly in the case or reasonably calculated to lead to the 22 discovery of admissible evidence. Plaintiffs contend they are seeking discovery on lobbying "(1) to learn 23 what Uber told regulators and politicians about its safety; (2) to understand the aims of those statements; 24 and (3) to attack Uber's potential defense that it did not act unreasonably because it followed rules and

 27 ³ Although there is a "sham" exception to the doctrine, Plaintiffs do not allege that it applies. Nor could 28 they. (See Blank, 39 Cal.3d at 325 ["not only were defendants' efforts genuine, they were also successful—and as such incapable of being deemed a mere sham."].)

1 regulations.” (Reply, 3.) Those arguments are entirely unconvincing.⁴ Whatever Uber may or may not 2 have told regulators and politicians about its safety record or practices has no legitimate bearing on 3 Plaintiffs’ remaining negligence-related claims. It cannot be a violation of a party’s duty of care to lobby 4 for laws and regulations, which is absolutely protected by the First Amendment.

5 Mercury Casualty Co. v. Scottsdale Indemnity Co. (2007) 156 Cal.App.4th 1212, cited by Uber, is 6 closely on point. There, a primary automobile liability insurer settled an underlying action against its 7 insured arising from an automobile accident, and then sought a declaratory judgment that the defendant 8 excess insurer was required by statute to reimburse it for its share of defense costs. Similar to Plaintiffs’ 9 requests here, the excess insurer served the plaintiff insurer was “a barrage of discovery demands, all 10 designed to ferret out the extent of [its] involvement in the passage” of the statute; the insurer “declined to 11 provide the bulk of this discovery, contending it was not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of 12 admissible evidence.” (Id. at 1216.) In particular, the excess insurer asked the primary insurer to identify 13 every person involved in the passage of the bill, provide the date of every meeting or consultation within 14 the Legislature regarding the bill, and produce all documents submitted by plaintiff to the Legislature in 15 favor of the proposed legislation, and asked it to admit that it had made various arguments to the 16 Legislature as to why the statute would provide benefits to the public. (Id. at 1216-1217 fns. 1, 2.) After 17 the trial court entered summary judgment in favor of the primary insurer, the excess insurer appealed, 18 contending the court erred in refusing to allow it to take discovery relating to the passage of the Insurance 19 Code provision at issue and defendant’s involvement in that process.

20 The Court of Appeal rejected the argument and affirmed, concluding that the fact that a party 21 “may not have been entirely selfless in its lobbying efforts” has no impact on the validity of the 22 legislation. (Id. at 1215.) As the court observed, “If the mixed motives of a legislative proponent,

23

⁴ Plaintiffs’ reliance on Hernandez v. Amcord, Inc. (2013) 215 Cal.App.4th 659 is misplaced. That case 24 held that “the Noerr-Pennington doctrine shields defendants from liability for their actions in petitioning 25 government officials. It does not provide a basis for exclusion of evidence of lobbying activities that 26 might be relevant to show a defendant’s knowledge of the dangerous nature of its product or a failure to 27 exercise ordinary care.” (Id. at 680.) Thus, the court held, the trial court in an asbestos exposure case had 28 abused its discretion by relying on the Noerr-Pennington doctrine to exclude evidence that the defendant had successfully lobbied for an exemption to an amendment to the Health & Safety Code banning asbestos spray construction products, which it argued was relevant and admissible to show negligence.
 Plaintiffs do not point to any such evidence here.

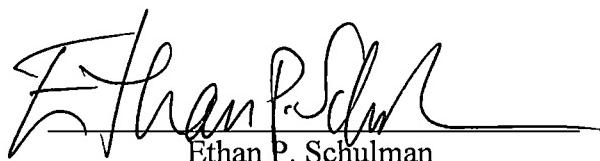

1 standing alone, were a basis for overturning legislation, we would have very few laws so it should come 2 as no surprise that we find no authority for this kind of review.” (Id.) Indeed, the court stated,

3 We cannot accept [defendant’s] implicit assertion that there would be anything suspicious, let 4 alone sinister, in the fact that [plaintiff] promoted the legislation, or even had a hand in its drafting.
 5 “Special interests” have been affecting the context of our laws for as long as our Legislatures have 6 been them, and while reasonable minds can (and do) disagree about whether that effect is too 7 significant to serve the common good, no one contends that our constitutional right to petition the 8 government should be abolished. . . . [Plaintiff] was clearly entitled to petition the Legislature in 9 support of any proposed legislation it chose to favor.

10 (Id. at 1221.) Even if defendant was “the driving force behind passage of the legislation,” the court 11 concluded, such involvement is “proper, however, and [defendant’s] attempt to spin it into something 12 sinister has never risen above the level of rank speculation and innuendo.” (Id. at 1226.) The trial court 13 therefore correctly denied the defendant’s request for discovery and granted summary judgment. (Id.)
 14 The same authority conclusively undermines Plaintiffs’ novel theory that evidence that Uber advocated 15 for a law or regulation concerning background checks, for example, would enable Plaintiffs to “attack” 16 any defense that Uber complied with it. Moreover, as Uber persuasively argues, allowing discovery into 17 such activities (not to mention admitting evidence of such activities at trial) presents a host of serious 18 practical obstacles to which Plaintiffs offer no solution. (Opposition, 13-14.) In short, Plaintiffs’ 19 lobbying theories go nowhere, and no legitimate purpose would be served by allowing discovery on this 20 topic.⁵

21 IT IS SO ORDERED.

24 ⁵ Moreover, many of Plaintiffs’ RFPs related to other lobbying activities are vastly overbroad and 25 irrelevant. (See, e.g., RFP Nos. 184 [driver or employee agent status], 195 [employment status of 26 drivers], 294 [California Proposition 22].) Plaintiffs’ argument that “[i]f Uber was telling regulators and 27 politicians that its drivers should be classified as independent contractors and this would do no harm 28 because its drivers were safe” (Reply, 3), is unduly speculative as Plaintiffs do not establish any connection between a driver’s employment status with Uber and the instant proceeding. Plaintiffs do not show that independent contractors are vetted any differently than employees.
